THE FEMININE GUT · PREPPING YOUR KITCHEN

Cooking With Ease

Prepping your kitchen.

> Your kitchen sets the tone for your entire health journey! It's more than just a room—it's the heart of your healing environment. The foods you keep within reach, the tools you have on hand, and the systems you set up now can either support your success… or sabotage your efforts.

A little intention today makes the week ahead smoother, simpler, and so much more nourishing. You'll spend less time stressing over what to eat and more time fueling your body with purpose.

Here's how to prep your space for success and set yourself up to thrive.

✦ Clear the clutter: out with the old

Start by removing foods that don't serve your healing right now. Look out for:

CLEAR OUT

- Gluten (bread, crackers, pastas)
- Dairy (milk, cheese, yogurt)
- Refined sugars (cookies, candy, sauces)
- Inflammatory oils (canola, soybean, vegetable oil)

THE FEMININE GUT

"This isn't about shame, it's about creating an environment that aligns with your goals. If it's not in your kitchen, it won't end up on your plate!"

Prep Your Way

Systems that make the week ahead simpler.

Choose your prep style: food prep vs. meal prep

Meal Prep

Make full meals in advance so you're ready to grab-and-go.

Food Prep

Chop veggies, cook proteins, prep sauces, then mix and match throughout the week.

See the Meal Prep vs Food Prep guide in your resources for more prepping guidance.

> Keep in mind, there's no one "right" way - just the way that works for your schedule and lifestyle.

Set up for success

- [ ] Keep your blender, cutting board, and favorite prep tools visible and ready to use.
- [ ] Batch-cook when you have energy. Make leftovers your friend.
- [ ] And celebrate every small step forward.

Make a family-friendly plan

Ask yourself:

- Will you adapt meals for your family or prepare separate components?
- Can you double-batch favorite recipes to keep everyone satisfied?
- What meals can your family join in on to make this a team effort?

Shop Smart

Fill your kitchen with foods that support your healing.

Stick to the perimeter

The outer edges of the grocery store are where the magic lives—fresh produce, clean proteins, healthy fats, and whole-food staples.

THE TEMPLE METHOD

Pro tip

Hit the frozen aisle for organic veggies and fruits to keep on hand for quick meals and smoothies.

Build your staples list

Stock your fridge and pantry with the basics:

- Clean proteins (wild fish, pasture-raised meats, eggs)
- Healthy fats (avocados, olives, coconut oil, ghee)
- Colorful veggies + fruits
- Herbs, spices, and healing extras (like bone broth or sauerkraut!)
