THE FEMININE GUT · MEAL PREP VS. FOOD PREP

Meal Prep vs. Food Prep

Cooking with ease.

> When it comes to staying on track with your Feminine Gut journey, preparation is everything but not all prep has to look the same. Let's break down the difference between food prep and meal prep so you can find a rhythm that supports your lifestyle, energy, and healing goals.

Keep in mind, there's no one-size-fits-all approach. You might prefer one method, use a mix of both, or shift depending on the week. The goal isn't about perfection — it's about progress. The more prepared you are, the easier it becomes to nourish your body well.

Meal Prep

Preparing full meals ahead of time so they're ready to heat and eat.

Food Prep

Preparing the components of meals so you can easily mix and match throughout the week.

THE FEMININE GUT · MEAL PREP VS. FOOD PREP

Meal Prep

Full meals, ready to heat and eat.

> Meal prep means preparing full meals ahead of time so they're ready to heat and eat. Think: portioned containers of lunches or dinners lined up in your fridge, ready to go.

It's an excellent strategy for anyone who...

- Thrives on structure and wants less guesswork during the week
- Has a busy schedule and needs quick, grab-and-go options
- Wants to reduce decision fatigue and stay consistent with nutrition goals
- Is tracking portions, macros, or specific nutrients as part of their health journey

BENEFITS OF MEAL PREPPING	WHY IT HELPS
01 Built-in backup plan	When life gets busy, your healthy meals are already waiting, no last-minute takeout needed.
02 Saves serious time	Cook once, eat multiple times. This reduces daily kitchen time and cleanup.
03 Helps with consistency	Having pre-portioned meals makes it easier to stay aligned with your health intentions, especially if you tend to make impulsive choices when hungry.
04 Ideal for singles or on-the-go families	You're not wondering, "What's for lunch?" every day. It's already decided.

Pro tip

Not every meal has to be prepped! Many clients find success prepping 2–3 days of meals at a time and leaving room for flexibility and fresh cooking later in the week.

Food Prep

Ready components, endless combinations.

> Food prep is all about preparing the components of meals, like roasted veggies, grilled proteins, sauces, or chopped produce, so you can easily mix and match throughout the week. It's a flexible approach that supports nourishment without locking you into repetitive meals.

This is a great option if you...

- Crave variety and don't want to eat the same thing every day
- Prefer to cook fresh but want to reduce weeknight stress
- Need options that work for multiple family members or changing schedules
- Like having nourishing ingredients at your fingertips without pre-planning every meal

BENEFITS OF FOOD PREPPING	WHY IT HELPS
01 Flexible and fresh	You're not stuck with one set meal; you can create something new each day with what you've prepped.
02 Saves time + reduces decision fatigue	The chopping and cooking are already done, so dinner comes together fast.
03 Easier alignment with your goals	You can build meals that support your healing, without reinventing the wheel every night.
04 No need to commit to full recipes	Just prep the basics and assemble as you go.

THE TEMPLE METHOD

Pro tip

Start with 2–3 core proteins, a big batch of roasted veggies, a fresh sauce or dip, and pre-washed greens. From there, you can build nourishing meals in minutes.
