THE FEMININE GUT · TRAVEL & SNACKS

Nourishment on the Go

Convenient snacks and travel foods for your Feminine Gut journey.

> Busy days deserve a plan that makes eating easier. Choose foods that fit your allergies, individual recommendations, and available refrigeration. Snacks are optional tools, not a requirement.

WHEN YOU NEED...	OPTIONS TO CONSIDER
01 Shelf-stable protein	Sealed tuna or chicken pouches, tolerated meat sticks, or a suitable protein powder. Check ingredients and storage directions.
02 Fruit & vegetables	Whole fruit, unsweetened fruit cups, applesauce pouches, or tolerated dried fruit. Pair with other foods when you want a more substantial snack.
03 Fats & crunch	Nuts, seeds, single-serve nut or seed butter, olive packs, or suitable crackers. Review allergen and cross-contact statements.
04 A small meal	A ready-to-eat grain pouch + a sealed protein pouch + a tolerated vegetable option. Check whether heating is required.
05 Drinks	Water or a beverage that fits your preferences and plan. Consider your tolerance for carbonation and caffeine.

✦ Simple combinations

- Apple + tolerated nut or seed butter.
- Suitable crackers + tuna or chicken pouch.
- Fruit + nuts or seeds.
- A refrigerated meal packed in an insulated bag.

> Collagen powders are not a one-for-one replacement for a complete protein source. Discuss how they fit your meals with your practitioner.

Pack With Confidence

A little preparation can make a busy day more manageable.

Your grab-and-go checklist

- [ ] Choose foods you already know you tolerate.
- [ ] Pack enough food for your expected schedule, plus a practical backup.
- [ ] Include water, utensils, napkins, and any needed container opener.
- [ ] Use an insulated bag with cold packs for perishable foods.
- [ ] Follow package refrigeration and use-by instructions. If temperature safety is uncertain, choose a sealed shelf-stable alternative.

Before buying a snack

Read the full ingredient list, allergen statement, serving information, and storage directions. "Gluten-free," "natural," or "wellness" branding does not automatically mean a product is appropriate for your needs.

Travel with your plan

Keep prescribed medications and recommended supplements in their labeled containers, and follow your individual instructions. Check travel rules for liquids and food at your destination before packing.

Practice flexibility

Choose the most suitable available option and return to your usual routine at the next opportunity. One different meal is a useful experience to discuss, not a reason to abandon your plan.
